A PARTY of wounded soldiers were being taken to a base hospital on a much over-crowded motor truck. The nurse accompanying them became anxious about their wounds. "I hope I am not hurting any of you," she said. "You're hurting me a lot," replied one of the soldiers. "But I am nowhere near you," exclaimed the nurse indignantly. "That's what's hurting me," was the reply.

A little barefoot boy came into the grocery store and sidled up to the candy case. Sticking one grimy hand into the pocket of his overalls he pointed with the other to the row of candy Easter eggs in the case. "I want one o' those," he remarked. The clerk handed him one and the little fellow turned to leave. "Where is your penny?" asked the clerk. The small boy shrugged his shoulders and kept on toward the door. "Daddy gets things in here without money," he said, "and what he done I do, too!" His father was a policeman.

As part of the president's program is to make democracy safe for the world as well as make the world safe for democracy, it is probable that allied armies will have to be kept in the field for some time to assist the new democracies in establishing government, maintaining order and preventing chaos, anarchy and bloodshed, such as invariably results from the attempts of the ignorant to establish by force and injustice class governments. —Medford Mail Tribune.

The attitude of the administration toward the co-ordinate branches of the government, notably the legislative branch, is a novelty, perhaps a dangerous novelty, in our national life. For the first time in our history the executive has assumed to demand for himself supreme power and supreme authority. —Pendleton Tribune.

We heard a native-born German suggest a solution for the disposition of Bill the Butcher. This man, who referred to all members of the German junker class as parasites, says that the war lord of the Hohenzollerns and the last of that ruling dynasty be put to work. "Let him live for the rest of his days earning his bread and meat by the sweat of honest toil. He can never atone for what he has done, but this will help some." —Hood River Glacier.

Hoover is allowing us more sugar per head now than was consumed before the war in some of the countries from which we imported it. —Eugene Morning Register.

As long as it is human nature to sort out human beings according to color, language, customs, etc., place them in separate groups and regard them as inherently competitive, there is going to be war. To try to secure permanent peace by capitalizing present war weariness into an international league backed by economic coercion, is precisely like trying to secure a permanent cure for smallpox by scraping off the skin eruptions of a convalescent patient. —Medford Sun.

A teacher in the sixth grade of one of our city schools finds time now and then, in spite of the ten thousand and one things unknown to the school-ma'am of our youth which the modern teacher is expected to teach, to give her pupils a talk on current history. Recently she told them one day some interesting things about Queen Victoria and her family. Portraits cut from various magazines illustrated the talk. Among them was a picture of the Duke of York. "And now, can any of you tell me what he is?" Quick as a flash the hand of a little girl in the second row went up. "I can tell what he is, Miss Blank," she said proudly. "He's the heir consumptive of the British throne."

"We had to stop our little girl answering the front door calls."

"Why?"

"The other day when Ensign Jones came to call on our eldest daughter he was dressed in his white uniform, and when the little opened the door and saw him she immediately called upstairs: 'Ma, how much bread do you want today?'"

The supervisor was visiting a country school and was asking some of the children questions. After a while he said to a primary class: "Now, I want one of you to ask me a question that I can't answer. After a few vain attempts, a small boy said: 'Please, sir, if you were stuck in a pool of mud up to your neck and a brick was thrown at your head, would you duck?'"

A woman lost her little curly poodle, and called on the police to find it. The next day one of the force came with the dog very wet and dirty. The lady was overjoyed and asked a number of foolish questions, among others:

"Where did you find my dear darling?"

"Why, ma'am," said the officer, "a fellow had him on a pole, and was washing windows with him."

"I see where seven Frenchmen on trial in Paris for espionage claim they are 'journalists,' but show no ability to write."

"Ahem!" said the practical newspaper man. "That seems to describe a journalist pretty well." —Birmingham Age-Herald.

The lawyer was sitting at his desk, absorbed in the preparation of a brief. So intent was he on his work that he did not hear the door as it was pushed gently open, nor see the curly head that was thrust into his office. A little sob attracted his notice, and turning, he saw a face that was streaked with tears and told plainly that feelings had been hurt. "Well, my little man, did you want to see me?" "Are you a lawyer?" "Yes. What do you want?" "I want"—and there was a resolute ring in his voice—"I want a divorce from my papa and mamma."

Dr. Arthur Davis, who used to be the Kaiser's dentist, is authority for the statement that the crown prince is the most egotistical person he ever met. As an instance of his credit the dentist recounts an occur-

"Marriage with so many of our marriageable young men in France is quite difficult," remarked Congresswoman Rankin. "It reminds me of the two girls who were conversing in a Paris tea room. 'I'm going to learn teaching,' one of them said. 'Teaching,' cried the other; 'why, I'd rather marry a widower with six children than be a teacher.' 'Ah, so would I,' sighed the first, 'but where's the widower.'"
